THE PLOT THICKENS

There were some dramatic finishes in the Round of 16 of the European Winter Open Teams Championship. Team Dyson won over the (twice) defending champions, Team Zimmermann, by just 5 IMPs. Team Eler defeated Ashe by only 2 IMPs. The other matches were decided by bigger margins, and the remaining qualifiers to the Quarter finals are: Hobaa, De Botton, Knottenbelt, Bianchi, Israel Blue and SPS Poland.

In the Swiss Cup, 28 teams qualified to Semifinal A; due to drop-outs (teams moving to other events), the last qualifier is the team ranked #35. Those 28 semi-finalists will be joined by 7 teams who were knocked out in the Round of 16. Top qualifiers were BARIS (121.37 VPs), ISTARI (104.62 VPs) and FRANCE GREEN (104.33 VPs).

Today the European Winter Mixed Teams Championship and the European Winter Open Pairs kick off.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY!

⚠ SWISS CUP FORMAT

The event is divided in three phases: qualification, semifinals, final.

a) Qualification

It will be played over 8 rounds of 14 boards each, with Swiss movement, on February 13th and 14th. After day one, the starting teams will be joined by the drop-in teams coming from the Open Teams Championship. Those teams are a maximum of 16 (the losers of the round of 32) and will be receiving a carry-over equal to the team placed 21st. They will not be paired against each other in the fifth round of the Swiss.

At the end, the teams will be split in semifinal A (36) and semifinal B (the rest). Since the maximum number of drop-in is equal to 8 (the losers of the round of 16), the minimum number of qualifiers from the qualification stage is equal to 28. The qualifiers will be receiving a linear carry-over score equal to 20 VP to the best ranked, and down to 0 to the last. The drop-in teams will be receiving a carry-over equal to the team placed 11th.

b) Semifinals

It will be played over 8 rounds of 14 boards each, with Swiss movement, on February 15th and 16th. The drop-in teams will not be paired against each other in the first round of the Swiss.

After day one, the teams in semifinal A will be joined by the drop-in teams coming from the Open Teams Championship. Those teams are a maximum of 4 (the losers of the quarter-finals) and will be receiving a carry-over equal to the team placed 15th. They will not be paired against each other in the fifth round of the Swiss.

The teams playing semifinal B will be receiving a linear carry-over score equal to 5 VP to the best ranked, and down to 0 to the last.

At the end, 20 teams qualify to Final A: a minimum of 16 from semifinal A, 2 from semifinal B, and a maximum of 2 from the Open Teams Championship.

The qualifiers will be receiving a linear carry-over score equal to 20 VP to the best ranked, and down to 0 to the last.

The drop-in teams receive a carry-over equal to the team ranked 3rd. The winner of semifinal B receives a carry-over equal to the team ranked 12th, while the team classified 2nd in semifinal B receives a carry-over equal to 0.

The teams not qualified to final A will be playing Final B (either Swiss or BAM: TBD).

c) Final

It will be played over 7 rounds of 8 boards each, with Swiss movement, on February 17th.

The drop-in teams will not be paired against each other in the first round of the Swiss.

In each case, the opponents of the drop-in teams will be drawn randomly.

⚠ MIXED TEAMS FORMAT

The event is divided in three phases: qualification, semifinals, final.

a) Qualification

It will be played over 8 rounds of 14 boards each, with Swiss movement, on February 15th and 16th. After day one, the starting teams might be joined by drop-in teams coming from the Open Teams Championship. Those teams, if any, will receive a carry-over and will not be paired against each other in the fifth round of the Swiss.

At the end, the teams will be split in semifinal A and semifinal B. There will be a carry-over to the Semifinals.

b) Semifinals

It will be played over 8 rounds of 14 boards each, with Swiss movement, on February 17th and 18th. The starting teams might be joined by drop-in teams coming from the Open Teams Championship. Those teams, if any, will receive a carry-over and will not be paired against each other in the first round of the Swiss.

At the end, some teams qualify to Final A.

c) Final

It will be played over 7 rounds of 8 boards each, either as a Round Robin or with Swiss movement, on February 19th.

There will be a carry-over from the Semifinals.

Final B

It will be played as a BAM scoring event, over two sessions of 16 boards each.

In case, the drop-in teams will be sorted randomly.

⚠ OPEN PAIRS

At the time the bulletin is issued we are not able yet to specify the format. What can be said, is there will be a qualification followed by a Final, and that the qualification stage might be split into semifinals A and B after day 1. Further details will be published as soon as the number of entries and possible drop in will be known.

EAT LIKE GOLD

@eatlikegold

David Gold is our guide to Prague's restaurant scene. His food blog @eatlikegold on Instagram is full of great recommendations. Here are two of his reviews so far:

COTTOCRUDO

- At Top Hotel

“ CottoCrudo is a swanky modern Italian restaurant at the four seasons hotel in Prague. The interiors are stunning and perfect for a romantic dinner. The food lives up to appearances too. Everything was great but I particularly loved the beef carpaccio made extra delicious by an oyster mayonnaise and the Wagyu bolognese was excellent too. I did actually try a bit of steak from someone else's plate - not shown in the video and that too was excellent. You can't order badly here though. What a treat.

CAFE IMPERIAL

- Na Poříčí 1072/15, 110 00 Petřská čtvrt

“ One of the most beautiful looking restaurants I have been too and the food is pretty good also. Service a little slow so not a place to come if you are in a hurry but otherwise definitely worth a try.

What is a book, film, or series that everyone should read or watch, and why?

MARTINE ROSSARD

“ Zia’s book “Bridge, a Love Story”. It’s really interesting for bridge players. I’ve bought it 3 times: I lost the first copy, so I bought a second one, and then I bought it again as a present. I even got my copy signed!

ELDAD GINOSSAR

“ Seinfeld. Old but gold!

GORDON HO & WAI LAM HO

“ The Prestige, by Christopher Nolan. It is about strategy and magic: very interesting! (Gordon)

The Queen’s Gambit because it is about chess - a mind sport like bridge! (Wai Lam)

BOYE BROGELAND

“ The Diving Bell and the Butterfly». Not a very well known movie (from 2007), but a very touching piece about Jean-Dominique Bauby, the former editor-in-chief for French Elle, who suffered a massive stroke at age 43 which gave him a «locked-in syndrome». After this he was only able to communicate with his left eyelid. Later I learned that he and the French bridge player Michel Abécassis were good friends.

NAFIZ ZORLU

“ Zia’s “Bridge, a Love Story”: you can learn what NOT to do!

ZACH GROSSACK

“ 2 answers - and comedies, because that’s my jam. Hacks, because it’s fantastic in its intentionality of comedic writing, and Arrested Development, because it introduced me to the world of what creative/surreal comedy that has morphed my sense of humor today!

A CONVERSATION WITH PROFESSOR SAMANTHA PUNCH

THE BRIDGE WORLD UNDER THE SOCIOLOGIST'S LENS

BY FRANCESCA CANALI

She sits among you at every major tournament. She plays, she competes, she travels from city to city like everyone else. But while you obsess over squeezes and endplays, she is quietly observing something else entirely: you. How you interact, how you fight, how you build partnerships and break them, how you forgive (or don't).

Professor Samantha Punch is a sociologist at the University of Stirling, a Scottish international player, and the mind behind BAMSA (Bridge: A MindSport for All). She has written two books on the human side of elite bridge and published dozens of academic papers dissecting our community with the precision of a scientist and the empathy of someone who truly belongs to it.

We asked her to tell us what she has observed, openly and honestly. What she told us is fascinating, sometimes uncomfortable, and deeply recognizable.

Tell us a bit about yourself.

I'm 55, originally from England but I've been living in Scotland for a long time. I live with my life partner Stephen Peterkin, who is also my bridge partner, so our world is very much bridge!

How did you learn to play?

After finishing my PhD, I was looking for something to fill the gap. I just showed up at a bridge club, almost on a whim. They told me I had to take lessons first, and I didn't quite understand why. I thought they could just explain the basics and I'd be fine! But they were already on lesson 11, so someone brought me the notes for lessons 1 through 10. I read them and joined the group halfway through. And that was it.

What is your proudest bridge achievement?

Probably getting to the semi-final of the World Bridge Games in 2016, in Wrocław.

But it was also incredibly frustrating. We were beating France in the semi-final after the first half of the 96-board match, but we lost in the last quarter. Then we played China for the bronze medal and lost that too, after being ahead in the first set. So we came away with nothing. It was my best moment and my worst moment at the same time.

Perfect material for a sociologist, right?

Absolutely. A double-edged sword, as always in bridge. It was really painful to come away empty-handed after nearly two weeks of competition. I think our team just got a bit too tired.

You're a Professor of Sociology, but your academic path is quite unusual.

Yes, I always say I'm a professor of sociology with no formal sociological qualifications! My first degree was in Latin American Studies, with Spanish, Portuguese, and a dissertation on children in Bolivia. Then I did a PhD in Geography and Development Studies, looking at rural childhoods in South America. My first job was in Social Work at Stirling, studying teenagers in Scotland. The common thread was always childhood, and really, the work was sociological in nature, even though I was trained in other disciplines. When I realized that, I started publishing in sociology journals, teaching sociology, and one great way to learn a new discipline is to teach it. I was always one step ahead of the students!

Can we consider the bridge community a small society?

Absolutely. It's a microcosm of society. It incorporates much of what we see in broader society. But a couple of things make it unique. First, because it's a partnership game, we're always working with someone while playing against others. It's a very relational society: cooperation and harmony on one side, conflict and tension on the other.

Second, particularly at the top level, you're dealing with very intelligent people. You don't have to be especially clever to enjoy bridge socially or at club level, but at the very top, there's a lot of smart individuals. And that can mean we're quite a critical community. We tend to take things apart and question them, rather than seeing the good in them. There's a sharpness to our community that has a downside: we can be overly critical, even negative. But the other side of that coin is that we can also be a warm and supportive community that looks after each other.

At the top level, people travel from one tournament to the next, always meeting the same faces around the world. It's not a regular job where you go home and separate work from personal life. How does this shape relationships?

I think there's a big distinction between professional and amateur players. I'm an amateur. I can be extremely competitive at the table, but away from it, I don't have to worry about competition. I can have friendships, community, networks.

For professional players, it's harder. They're competing not only at the table but also away from it, for sponsors. And the sponsor pool is shrinking: there are fewer very wealthy sponsors coming through, while the number of professionals keeps growing. That creates real tension, because this is their livelihood, this is how they pay the bills.

From the interviews I've done, I've heard about some of the less pleasant maneuvering that can happen. If you're playing on an amateur team, you can freely admit to mistakes. But on a professional team, if your contract isn't secure for the following year, you might be tempted to highlight your teammates' mistakes more than your own. It creates an ambiguous kind of community: on one hand, you're socializing and having fun with friends; on the other, you're competing for a smaller and smaller job market.

How does this constant duality of friendship and competition shape a person's personality over time?

I think people learn to navigate it in their own way. Those at the very top, who are more secure, can afford to just be themselves. But for those in the tier just below, it's a difficult tightrope to walk. There's a lot of uncertainty: contracts are precarious, sometimes only for a year, and I've heard of them being broken along the way.

Is it possible to have real friends in the bridge world?

That's an interesting question. Even as an amateur, all my holidays go to bridge. The last non-bridge holiday I had was about 20 years ago! Most of my weekends are bridge too. Over time, my friends outside bridge got tired of me never being available. They'd invite me to their 40th birthday or their wedding, and it would clash with a tournament I'd committed to months in advance. Gradually, those friendships faded.

And now that I also research bridge, there are no boundaries left between work and play. I'm always observing, always making connections, even when I'm playing.

So over the years, I've lost many of my non-bridge friends, and I've become more dependent on the bridge community. I genuinely believed those were real friendships. But I know of situations where someone very active in the bridge community went through a difficult time, and the support from bridge friends was much less than expected. Old non-bridge friends would probably have rallied around more. Many bridge friends were just... absent.

I think as bridge players, we can be a bit selfish inside our bridge bubble. When we see people, we're great with them. But when we don't, it's out of sight, out of mind. We assume people have other networks, but for those who've given up their other networks for bridge, it can become very isolating.

That said, I'm sure this isn't the same for everyone. But it does raise the question: are bridge friends truly real friends, or just bridge friends?

Could there be a link between the personality it takes to become a top player and the ability to form deep personal connections?

I think so. In one of our studies, we looked at different types of players: competitors, socializers, self-improvers, and mind-gamers. There's a real distinction, especially between competitors and socializers.

To reach the elite level, you have to commit intensely, to the exclusion of many other things in your life. That focus on the game can come at the expense of relationships. And there may be another element: some highly intelligent bridge players might have slightly less emotional intelligence. If you're exceptionally good at cards, you might be less skilled at managing difficult emotions and relationships. So when something difficult happens, you avoid it because you don't know how to respond.

But I wouldn't say friendship is impossible. In my academic career, there's plenty of competition too, yet you still make good friends among competitors. I think the key difference is that in a regular job, there are structures to protect people: workplace policies, employment regulations, clear pathways. In bridge, everything is much more informal. Contracts aren't as robust. And that informality is what makes the trust issue more insecure.

What are your views on the women's category in a mind sport?

My views have evolved. I started out strongly believing we should get rid of it. I still think it's problematic in some ways, but I now feel it exists for a reason. Gender inequalities persist. Women still carry the bulk of childcare responsibilities, and at key points in a bridge career, they simply can't invest the same time as men. There will always be some structural inequalities.

Attitudes are getting better. People are making fewer assumptions than they used to, and I think it has improved compared to 20 years ago. But until we reach genuine equity in training opportunities, playing opportunities, and access to the best partners and teammates, the women's category serves as a necessary safeguard.

The mixed category is becoming more important, and I've heard young women themselves starting to say they don't see the need for a separate women's category. When that generation feels they're competing on truly equal terms, perhaps we can gradually phase it out. But it could take a very long time, and the childcare issue might mean we never fully get there.

And the seniors' category?

I think it makes sense. Although you can play bridge throughout your whole life, most people do start to slow down. Thought processes change; it gets harder to remember a complex system. And as people live longer, the category is getting broader. Someone actually raised at the EBL seminar the idea of a "super senior" category, separating players aged 60+ from those aged 75+. There is a real difference between playing bridge at 60 and at 75, and if we have more and more people in their 80s wanting to compete, it might be worth considering.

Tell us about BAMSA. How did it all start?

It started in 2013. As a sociologist who also plays international bridge, I simply wanted to interview my heroes, pick the brains of the world's best players, and understand what goes on behind the scenes. The life of a professional bridge player is quite unique, and I was genuinely curious.

My plan was modest: do a couple of interviews at each tournament I attended, and after a few years, I'd have enough material for a book when I retired. But I was enjoying it so much that I thought, why sit on all this? At the same time, I'd been researching the sociology of childhood for over 20 years and was running out of fresh ideas. This could revitalize my research by connecting it to something I loved.

And there was a legitimate academic case for it. Bridge connects to community, well-being, mental health, brain fitness: these are major societal issues. It's not just a bit of fun. From the research, very clear themes emerged around power inequalities, the professional life, and especially gender inequalities. I realized the bridge world had no gender policies whatsoever, while every other sector of society did. As a sociologist, maybe I could encourage some of those policies to be developed.

How was it funded?

I started very small. A friend gave me literally 300 euros to get my first interviews transcribed. Then EBED (English Bridge Education & Development) gave me a small grant for a survey on bridge and well-being. We got over 7,000 responses from that, which produced a solid paper. Each success built credibility for the next step.

The EBL and WBF were supportive early on with small grants that we could do a lot with. Then came our first big funding: the WBF contributed about 27,000 €. That was a game-changer.

As people saw we could deliver, that we published results and created accessible resources like videos, podcasts, and summaries, the crowdfunding became easier. Then Mike Levine from the US offered a matching grant: 100,000 dollars, on the condition that I raised another 100,000 first. That took a lot of work, but it was easier because of the track record we'd built. Norway has also been very supportive from the start.

For our current study on bridge in schools, we chose England, Scotland, the USA, and Norway precisely because those are the countries that really understood what we were doing and saw the value in evidence-based research for lobbying governments and getting bridge into schools.

We now have a new PhD on bridge funded by the Scottish Government, the University of Stirling and the WBF.

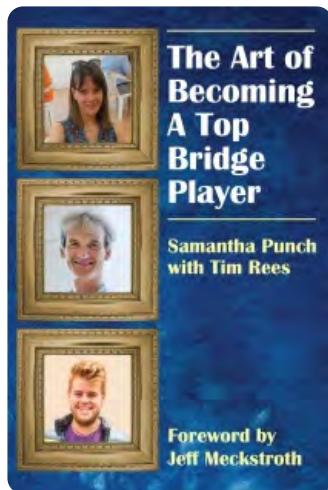

Is bridge too complex for modern society?

It's another double-edged sword. On one hand, yes, we need to make entry points simple, fun, and engaging. But on the other, we shouldn't dumb it down too much, because its complexity is what people love. From our interviews with young players, some say they don't have time to invest in learning the whole thing. But others say they love that you can't master it quickly, that it's challenging, that it makes you think. And because it's scaffolded in stages, you can enjoy it at each level.

I think the solution is to keep the traditional competitive format but introduce additional, more accessible formats alongside it. Like chess did with blitz and rapid. We need faster games, shorter formats, more flexibility. The "drop-in" idea is interesting: instead of committing to a three-hour club session, you play in one-hour segments and can come and go. Some people stay the whole session, others just play for an hour.

Bridge Battle is a good example of making the first encounter exciting and engaging. It's got characters, fun terminology, tangible outcomes. And Norway's cute animations are wonderful for that very first step. But we need to think carefully about how to transition people from those fun introductions to actual bridge.

We also need practical solutions at the club level. I heard about an idea from Florida where beginners play alongside the regular session, supervised by a different club member each week. The beginners get three "chips" that they can use to ask questions. It makes them think about when to use their questions rather than becoming dependent on constant help. And we desperately need something like "The Queen's Gambit" for bridge: a mainstream cultural moment that shows the diversity and excitement of the game. We have the stories for it. We have the scandals, the drama, the human interest.

a heart discard, ruffed a heart to hand, and with the ♣J in the slot had the rest; 12 tricks for +480. At the other table Aldo Gerli, for Overdeck, found a wafer-thin take-out double on the East cards. The extent to which this distracted his opponents is unclear, but they landed in the substantially inferior game of 3NT, which on a heart lead would have required that spades come in without loss. As it was, the lead was the nine of diamonds, and Alan Sze made the same 12 tricks as in the other room for +490 and no swing.

For Overdeck, Antonio Palma and Andrea Manno bid quickly to 4♠, Palma's 2♦ rebid showing a spade singe-suiter. Palma won the diamond lead and led a spade to his ace, picking up the singleton queen. He drew the outstanding trumps then played the queen of clubs, Wai Lam Ho winning the ace and leading a heart to the queen and ace. Palma cashed the diamonds for won the ace of diamonds and led dummy's heart up, Sze taking the ace and returning his remaining heart to the eight, nine and ruff. Gerli led a club to the king, cashed the ace of spades, then played the queen of diamonds – king, ruff. The ten of hearts was ruffed with the jack and over-ruffed, and now ace and another club promoted the ten of spades as the setting trick; down one for -100.

Wai-Lam Ho's 1♥ response over the 1♦ overcall was a transfer to spades, 1♠ showed two or three spades, and 4♥ showed the major two-suiter, offering Gordon Ho a choice of games. He of course chose 4♠, so the same contract as at the other table but, because of the transfer response, played from the other side of the table. Palma led ace and another heart, Ho winning the king and playing a spade to the jack and king. Back came the five of spades to dummy's nine. Ho played the king of clubs and, when that was ducked, switched his attention to diamonds, leading to the ace then continuing with the jack to the king and ruff. Ho ruffed a heart, took a club pitch on the queen of diamonds, and ruffed a club to hand. He could cash the ♠Q followed by the ♥Q, and that was 10 tricks for +620 and 12 IMPs to Hobaa.

Seven pairs bid and made ♠ while eight went down, as did the only one in 3♠.

Chiu opened 2♣, strong and artificial, and Sze's response showed a bad hand, 0-4 HCP. Two No Trump was non-forcing, but Sze had enough to go on to game, which he did via Stayman. On finding the four-four fit, he raised to 4♥.

John Overdeck led the three of diamonds against 4♥, Chiu winning the ace and playing three rounds of hearts. Overdeck won the queen and exited with his fourth heart to dummy's jack, while Gerli pitched two spades and one diamond. Chiu won the heart and ran the eight of clubs to Overdeck's queen, and Overdeck got out with a diamond. Chiu won in hand and cashed the ace of clubs then the diamonds. Gerli threw a club, so Chiu had a third club trick and 10 in all, +620. Manno's 2♣ was either 18-19 balanced or game-forcing; 2♦ was waiting, and 2NT therefore a balanced game-force. Puppet Stayman found the heart fit and, once again, South declared the heart game.

Ho too led a diamond, Manno winning and playing three rounds of hearts. Back came the fourth heart. East had discarded spade, diamond, diamond. Now Manno ran the eight of clubs, losing to the queen, and back came a diamond. On this trick East pitched a club, so Manno had three heart tricks, four diamonds and three clubs, ten in all for +620 and no swing. Against the same line of play, neither East felt able to keep the club guard. Perhaps the West players could have helped more via the order in which they played their hearts, showing that they had the spades well covered?

Thirteen pairs played in 4 \heartsuit and only one went down.

Gerli ruffed. He cashed the ace of spades, led a heart to the jack, and ruffed a spade with the queen. A heart to the eight was followed by the queen of spades and, when that was not covered, Gerli ran it, pitching dummy's third diamond. Sze ruffed and returned the king of hearts. Gerli won that and gave up a spade, after which he had the rest for down one and -100.

Wai-Lam Ho could open 2♣ to show a weak hand with both majors, at least five-four, and when Gordon Ho could show genuine heart support Wai-Lam's extra distribution convinced him to raise to game.

Palma led a diamond, Manno winning and switching to a club. Declarer won the ace, cashed the ace of spades, and led a heart to the jack, discovering the bad split. However, this declarer had not been forced at trick two so was in control of the play. Ho ruffed a spade with the queen then ran the ♠7 and continued with a further heart finesse. After cashing the ace of hearts, Ho could give up a spade and claim the rest; 11 tricks for +450 and 11 IMPs to Hobaa. Eleven pairs bid and made 4 \heartsuit , while three went down. There was also one N/S who conceded -500 in 5♦ doubled.

Gerli opened the East hand at the one level then bid the heart game in response to Overdeck's negative double. Having bid so much already, he was unwilling to defend 5♦ doubled, though that was, of course, beatable, easily enough. He went on to 5♥ but that was doubled to conclude the auction.

Against 5♥ doubled, Chiu cashed the ace of diamonds and continued with the king, which

The Hos bid comfortably to game, 2NT being a four-card game+ raise, 3♣ a minimum, and 3NT a diamond shortage. That didn't excite Wai Lam, so he signed off in game, where he made 12 tricks after a trump lead, +680.

The Overdeck/Gerli convention card is inadequate, so we are guessing to some degree what their auction meant. However, with a different partner in the team, Gerli plays that a 2NT response to 1♥ would only show an 8-11 four-card raise, while a 2♣ response is a GF relay, which presumably includes game+ raises of one of a major. Three Spades was clearly a slam try, and that was sufficient to tempt Overdeck into asking about keycards, despite the 4♥ sign-off. The two key-card response was not however sufficient to tempt Overdeck to go on to slam.

Stopping in 5♥ was right at double dummy, because a club lead establishes a second trick for the defence, but wrong in practice as the actual lead was a diamond, so 12 tricks were made for +680 and a flat board.

One pair bid slam, and made it after a spade lead.

Overdeck did not open the West hand. Gerli's 2♠ opening was 18-19 balanced (the very strong opening would have been 2♦), and 3♠ showed four hearts and a game-force. Gerli admitted to also holding four hearts and Overdeck went on with a spade cuebid and, when he showed two keycards, Gerli went on to slam.

Chiu led a club, Gerli winning on table to lead a heart to the king and ace. A continuation of the club attack saw Sze ruff and return a spade. Gerli went to dummy to take a heart finesse, and losing to the jack meant down two for -200. Gordon Ho did open the West hand, and he followed up by bidding 3♥ freely in response to the negative double. That saw Wai Lam Ho launch into Keycard then bid the small slam on finding Gordon with two.

Palma led his singleton club round to declarer's ace and, as at our first table, declarer led a heart to the king and ace, conceded a club ruff, then finessed into the now bare jack to go down two for a flat board.

Andrea MANNO

Only two pairs stopped safely in game, the other 14 were all down in slam. Coincidentally, the successful pairs were in the same match.

Sze opened a 14-17 NT and Gerli overcalled 2♣ to show at least five-four in the majors. The Sze/Chiu convention card says that they play Modified Lebensohl. Whatever the modification is (transfers?), Chiu had more than sufficient to bid 3NT at his next turn and that concluded the bidding.

Playing Gerli to be the shorter in clubs, Sze got that suit wrong, but still had 11 tricks for an easy +460.

Palma's 1NT was 15-17 and Wai Lam Ho did not come into the auction. Two Clubs asked, 2♦ denied a major, and 2♣ asked again, this time about range. That is as far as the card goes, but it looks as though 3♣ showed top end of the range with diamonds, and 3♦ admitted to diamond support. From there, your guess may well be considerably better than mine. The bottom line is that Palma/Manno reached an excellent slam that was not even investigated at the other table. Declarer can cope with diamonds four-one, as long as he picks up the clubs without loss, but five-nil was just too much.

Palma was down one after the queen of spades lead for -50 and 11 IMPs to Hobaa – unlucky. He won the spade lead and led a diamond to the ace then the seven of diamonds to the ten and queen. King of clubs and a second club to the nine was followed by the ace of clubs. That was ruffed and there was still a trump trick to be lost.

The top N/S score was +110 from 2♠ doubled. Six Clubs was bid and made three times, while 6♦ went down four times. The rest made 11 or 12 tricks in 3NT.

Gerli opened as dealer while Ho did not. Gerli's 1♠ opening saw Overdeck respond 1♠ and Sze overcall 2♥. Gerli supported spades, and Chiu supported hearts and, when Overdeck now jumped to the spade game, everybody had done their bidding, so he was left in peace to play there. There was nothing to the play. Sze led the king of clubs, but none of declarer's red-suit losers were going anywhere, and in the fullness of time he lost two hearts and two diamonds so was down one for -100.

Where Wai-Lam passed as dealer, Gordon opened 1♠ in third seat. Palma doubled and Wai-Lam showed a constructive four-card raise to at least 3♠. When Manno now showed his hearts and Gordon jumped to 4♠, Palma convinced himself that he had enough extra playing strength to be worth another bid. He competed with 5♥ and the best we can say for this hopeless contract is that at least it didn't get doubled.

Gordon led the ace of spades against 5♥, switching to his singleton club on sight of dummy. Wai-Lam ducked the king, so Manno played on hearts, cashing the ace then leading low to the jack and losing to the queen. He ruffed the spade return in dummy and cashed the king and ace of diamonds before leading a club to the ten and jack. Wai-Lam cashed the ♠A and ♦J and that was down three for -300 and 9 IMPs to Hobaa.

One North made 3♠ and one West made 4♠. Twelve pairs were down in 4♠, sometimes doubled, and one South lost -500 in 5♣ doubled.

The two auctions were identical up to 2NT. Now Gerli just jumped to 4♠ and played there, while Wai-Lam bid only 3♠ then allowed his partner to declare 3NT.

More often than not, it wouldn't have mattered which game was chosen, but there was a nasty surprise waiting for Gerli, in the shape of a five-one trump break.

Chiu led the six of clubs to the king and ace and Sze switched to the eight of hearts. Chiu won the ace, perforce, and switched back to clubs. Gerli played ace, king, then ten of spades. Chiu won the queen and still had the ♠9 to come for down one and -50.

Palme led the eight of hearts against 3NT, Manno winning the ace and switching to the six of diamonds. Gordon won the ace and played ♦Q, a club to the jack, and a third club to the king and ace. He had 10 tricks for +430 and 10 IMPs to Hobaa.

Three pairs made 3NT while one went down. Nine pairs went down in 4♠, there was one East in 6♦ down two, and two Souths lost -800 in 3♦ doubled.

Overdeck opened 1♦ and rebid 3♦, which saw Gerlie ask for keycards then bid 6NT to protect his heart holding. After a spade lead Gerlie could win and knock out the ace of clubs for 12 tricks, +990.

Gordon Ho also opened 1♦ but rebid 1NT. Wai-Lam Ho asked a series of questions, at the end of which he bid the small slam in diamonds. The ace of clubs lead merely served to speed up the play; 12 tricks for +920 but 2 IMPs to Overdeck. The Hos had to play it in diamonds, because a heart lead beats 6NT if it is played by West. Either slam is fine with East at the helm.

Three pairs missed slam, with all the rest opting for 6♦.

Palmer opened 1♦ and Wai-Lam overcalled 1NT. Gordon transferred to spades, but Palma made an artificial 2NT rebid which would seem to have shown hearts, as otherwise Manno's 4♥ bid doesn't make much sense. Wai-Lam doubled 4♥ and that ended the auction. Gordon led the three of spades, Manno rising with the ace and playing ace then queen of diamonds, ruffing out the king. Manno led a low heart to the king and ace and back came the king of spades, followed by the ace of clubs. No doubt it was something of a blow to Wai-Lam when that got ruffed. Manno could have made the rest by drawing trumps and cashing out the diamonds, but what if hearts were four-one? He instead cashed the jack of diamonds and continued with another diamond, allowing Gordon to ruff. However, he could win the club return and now draw trumps and cash out for 10 tricks and +790.

Sze also opened 1♦ and Gerli also overcalled 1NT. Overdeck transferred to spades and Sze just repeated the diamonds. However, when Gerli's 4♣ came back to him, now he bid 4NT to suggest long diamonds but also a second suit. Chiu responded 5♣, pass or correct, then bid 5♥ over Sze's 5♦. By now Gerli was doubling everything and the music finally stopped in 5♥ doubled, against which Overdeck led the ten of hearts. Gerli won the ace and switched to the king of spades, but Chiu won that, played ace then queen of diamonds to king and ruff, and could draw trumps and cash out for 11 tricks and +850, worth 2 IMPs to Hobaa.

Five Hearts doubled made twice, and 4♥ doubled once. Four Hearts undoubled made six times but was down two after a spade lead on one occasion. There were three successful diamond partscores by N/S, two E/Ws were down in 4♣, and one West was down one in 3♠.

The set score was 55-4 in favour of Hobaa. There were three more 14-board sessions to play, so Overdeck didn't need to panic just yet, but they already had quite a bit of work to do, needing to gain better than an IMP a board over those three sessions, so would want to start session two on the front foot.

A fairly natural auction here, with North splintering in support of diamonds at their second turn. Not sure who initiated the slam sequence; their card says, "Turbo keycard," which is unfamiliar to me. (Turbo is not especially well known in North America. It is a way of showing keycards after locating a fit at a low level and starting to make control showing bids. The first to bid 4NT shows 0,2 or 4 keycards. Bypassing 4NT shows an odd number of keycards, 1, 3 or 5. Coordinator). Nonetheless, an excellent grand slam: no guesses, no finesses.

Another Polish club beginning, and, according to David Burn, who was helpfully commenting, 1♥ was majors first, 1♠ could be “lots of things,” 2♣ was artificial, 2♠ a good hand with spades, and South’s 3♦ showed four or more of that suit. From there, a keycard auction to the grand slam – no swing in this match. A mostly flat board at the other tables with a couple of pairs stopping in 6♦ and one mishap in 7♣.

He returned a club, declarer taking the ace and leading a low heart to the queen (a welcome sight) and ace. A spade was led and the ace ducked. He now drew trumps (South pitching the ♣2 on the second round) ending in hand to advance the ♦10, covered with the jack, queen and king. South exited with the ♣3, won by North. When North played the ♥J, South forgot to overtake, turning a matching-tying extra undertrick into a push.

ROUND OF 16 – STANZA 2

A REVIEW

JOS JACOBS

The early afternoon round on Saturday turned out to be full of interesting deals, both in the bidding and in the play/defence. The set got underway with a really remarkable swing board, I thought. I cannot remember having seen a grand slam swing at almost every table still in play during the later stages of a top-class knock-out event. Still, this is what happened on the opening board: at seven out of our eight tables the grand was missed by one of the N/S pairs. In only one match it was a disappointing push for +1460 to N/S.

Here is what happened on this opening board in the Secrets Of Secrets v. Bianchi match. The most secret of the secret weapons no doubt is the conversation Zia is able to launch with his partner David Gold and his Italian friends (or opponents, if you insist). More about that later on. Zia/Gold are playing with Auken-Welland as team-mates. The Bianchi team consists of four equally stylish Italians: V. Giubilo-Bianchi and Porta-Cima.

The 3♥ transfer and the 4♣ advanced cuebid speak for themselves. At many tables the auction got underway like that. The problem arose when South had to take over the initiative too early. Zia was in good company, however, as we shall see below. Secrets of Secrets +1460.

In the Closed Room, they showed one of the ways to the grand.

At the other table, Porta immediately seized his extra chance to exchange information. Joe Grue tried his best to muddy the waters a bit more but in retrospective it can be said that his 6♣ bid was more helpful to his opponents: North's 6♦ bid would now definitely show serious extra values. South knew enough and was rewarded with +2210 and 13 IMPs.

In the Zimmermann v Dyson match, N/S had similar problems.

At the other table, North made a cuebid in a suit without the ace, so South had every reason to go all out, he thought. He was right and thus gained 13 IMPs for his team as well.

Here are a few more sequences, both successful and unsuccessful.

South's 4♣ showed extra values but also ate up some useful bidding space...

In the Hobaa v. Overdeck match, both Souths bid 4♣ over East's double of 3♥ so they ended up in 6♠ as well for no swing.

An interesting variation occurred in the Mavericks v. Knottenbelt match. The Knottenbelt N/S pair were among the ones NOT to open 2NT and the grand was missed. The Maverick pair had little trouble and produced quite a different sort of sequence.

North's 2♠ was explained as a constructive weak two. As you can imagine, this contract was not a great success (down three, +150 to Bianchi). When the hand was over, Valerio Giubilo said to David Gold: "You owe me a beer for not doubling." To be continued below.

At the other table, there was less lack of excitement.

East's 1NT was 10-13 hcp but even a heart lead by South would not have defeated the contract, because North has no entry next to his six-card suit. Duck the heart, win the diamond shift and play a spade. E/W +550 and next board.

After this board, David Gold turned to Giubilo and said: "Does this count for a beer?"

In the other room, East did not open and E/W thus reached a more normal looking but less valuable contract. Scoring +130 cost Bianchi's team 9 IMPs.

The board below was played in 4♥ at all tables. Still, a few declarers went down.

Two of our three culprits were playing in the same match so unveiling the Secrets of their Secrets does not cost them any IMPs. North led a spade to declarer's ace, and both declarers next tried to shed a club on a top spade prematurely. North ruffed, tried a club to partner's ace and got another spade through. No matter what declarer did, North would ruff this with his ♥K and give partner a club ruff for the rather unexpected (undeserved?) setting trick. The third culprit shall remain unnamed...

Next, we proudly present a pretty insoluble defensive problem:

At a number of tables, N/S languished in 4♥. The trumps are 4-1 but does this matter in defending 4♥? If East leads the ♠J and West ducks this, what can declarer do? If he ducks as well, East will continue the suit and collect two undertricks later on but if declarer wins his king, East has a spade left to reach his partner as soon as he gets the lead with one of his aces.

So at first, rather superficial, glance, 3NT looks the better game contract, even more so when the hearts break 3-2 because in that case, 3NT is cold with West entryless. With the hearts 4-1, declarer might run into trouble, however. West leads a spade (or East leads the ♠J, for that matter). Declarer, North, wins the second round of the suit but...on correct (superhuman?) defence, this second round of spades will never come because, East on lead with his ♠J, will shift to an exhilarating low club. Next, East will duck the ♦A once and dummy South will be dead. East still had a spade as a safe exit to enable West to lock the lead in the North hand.

A few boards later, I spotted an exquisite miniature:

Open Room

This contract presented no problems. Ten tricks, Bianchi +130.

For the beauty of our game we have to move over to the other table:

Closed Room

West	North	East	South
Milner	Porta	Grue	Cima
—	1♣	Pass	1♦
Pass	1NT	All Pass

Over South's 1♦ transfer, the 1NT rebid showed 14-16 but denied three or more hearts.

East found the fine lead of a low heart to West's ♥10 and declarer's ace. A spade went to dummy's ♠10 and the ♦J was run to East's king. East returned spade. The contract was made for 90 and 6 IMPs to Bianchi.

At the halfway point, in only two of our eight matches the margin was less than 10 IMPs, but we have seen often before that everything can still happen in the tense and/or nervous second halves.

ROUND OF 16 – STANZA 3 & SWISS CUP

DON'T QUOTE ME

MARK HORTON

I usually take a walk after lunch, contemplating how I might introduce the next article. Reading Saturday's copy of The Times (I get it for Andrew Robson's column) I spotted a headline, "The Winter of their content" which reminded me of the opening line of Shakespeare's Richard III, "Now is the winter of our discontent". Playing a bridge tournament in February I guess either could apply to how the players feel.

My thoughts turned to other famous opening and closing lines that might in someway be linked to the Winter Transnational.

Given that Saturday was Valentine's Day, I wondered about "It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife." However, that might be useful when the Mixed Teams gets under way.

"It was the best of times, it was the worst of times." A bridge player can certainly relate to that.

"Call me Ishmael. "A poignant reminder of an absent star.

"After all, tomorrow is another day." That's good to remember if you happen to be eliminated. I'm sure you can think of many more, but it seems to me that the closing line of Some like it Hot is the one that we should all take to heart: "Well, nobody's perfect."

After that divertissement its time to see how things developed in the third session of the round of 16 in the Open Teams and the seventh session of the Swiss Cup.

When West did not open North put the ball into play. South's whimsical 3NT was brushed aside by West's double and North introduced his second suit. South kept going over 4♣ (he probably considered bidding 4NT, letting North choose). West's forcing pass saw East elect to take the money.

Declarer ruffed the spade lead and played the ♦Q for the king and ace and continued with the ♣J. When it held he played another club and East took the ♣A as West pitched the ♥6. The ♣9 saw West ruff and exit with the ♦10 and declarer could not avoid two down, -300 and 5 IMPs to Mavericks.

Using 2NT to show a minor suited hand is described in The Mysterious Multi. This is an interesting variation, well suited to the Precision methods being employed by NS.

That was two down, -300.

Would 5♠x have made?

Possibly.

If South leads a club declarer wins and will probably play the ♠K. When South follows with a low card declarer must unblock the ♠10/J from dummy. When North discards declarer continues with the ♠9. If that holds declarer must play a heart to the jack, cash the ♥A and play a third heart. South ruffs, but declarer is sure to score 11 tricks.

I imagine declarer cashed the ♠K (without unblocking) and saw North discard. If declarer now plays a second spade he cannot make 4♣.

All Pass

1♣ 2+♣, 12-14 balanced (can have 5♦)
18-19 balanced (not usually 5♦) or natural
1♥ Spades

With the ♦K appearing to be worthless, South did not venture beyond 2♣. It meant the loss of 10 IMPs and Mavericks led 76-54.

One small point; when South bids 2♠ North can be sure partner will have four-card support. Does that make his hand worth a raise? Those who raise included Ola Rimstedt (4♠) and Ekrem Serdar (4♠). Several players opened 1NT. When North transferred to spades Erikas Vainikonis broke the transfer with 3♠, while Ido Moskovitz did it with 2NT.

12 pairs bid the spade game, four of them picking up 39 Imps between them.

Board 11. Dealer South. None Vul.

West led the ♣A and declarer could not avoid a trump loser, finishing two down, -100 for 14 IMPs to Zimmermann.

The same number of IMPs changed hands in de Botton v Bridgescanner, the former's 6NT comparing with the doomed 6♦ and in Bridge Trainer v Israel Blue, the latter making 6♠ after the lead of the ♣A, the former going down following West's lead of the ♦4.
